Veterinary Education Today launch career fair during VET Fall

Toronto – Veterinary Education Today, conference and medical exposition (VET) announces the launch of the VET Career Fair – 2022. Held in conjunction and collocated with VET, VET Career Fair will take place October 28th-29th at the International Centre, Toronto.

“The demand for vet care is rising, and many practices are struggling with staff shortages at all levels, add to that more veterinarians are retiring than graduating, along with the increase in pet adoptions during the pandemic. As such, hospitals, practices, agriculture/farm, and government agencies are faced with serious shortages and hiring challenges. As such the VET Career Fair will be positioned to attract all disciplines. This includes but is not limited to veterinarians, technicians, support staff, pet resort personnel, and hospital staff.” Reported Lee Baker, Event Director VET.

VET’s career fair is going to target all areas of the career funnel, including high school students, veterinary and technician graduates and those employed considering other opportunities. Candidates will be able to meet with a variety of potential employers and explore various career opportunities in the veterinary profession. There will be potential for lunch and learns, along with sessions that will provide career seekers with the tools and knowledge to design and fulfil their career goals.

Attendees will gain access to no-charge career development sessions and can register for the on-line career portal long before the career fair. There will be free admission, free parking and access to transit.
